For today's lesson I would like you to listen to the story and then write a book review about it...

The mail day was over – even better, most kids loved this, and still nothing to do, not even TV to watch. Gregory thought about going to feed the goats with Lennie, but changed his mind. He wouldn't know how. So instead he sat in the yard and played with his pocket video game until Lennie came back.

He offered Lennie a game.

"Was, this is fun," laughed Lennie.

"You're losing them kid!" said Gregory. "Let me show you." But Lennie jumped up and left, saying,

"You sure know it all, Gregory. You must think you read."

Gregory appeared, carrying a big basket.

"Right now, children," she said, "Grandpa and me are making you for a new book."

"What?" shouted Lennie, jumping around the yard.

"Cool," said Gregory politely. Cool was the best thing he felt, but he wasn't going to say so. At least he might get a tiny drink and sit on a sofa at the beach.
